

Deloitte Facilitator Excellence | DFX

Practice #2 -- Individual practice session

Facilitation versus Presentation

FACILITATION VERSUS PRESENTATION

Overview of the practice session

- You will have 10 minutes to transition from the main group and be ready to facilitate including preparation of any flipcharts or other materials you may need.
- You will be in a small breakout group of no more than 6 people and a facilitator. Each of you will have 10 minutes to facilitate your practice session.
- This practice session will be recorded, so ensure your mobile phone is sufficiently charged and has enough storage space to record an extended video.
- Once you complete the session, your DFX facilitator will lead a short feedback session to enable you to further enhance your skills in future practice sessions. Please refer to the DFX Rating Form for skills you are being evaluated on. All of which will be covered in the program.

Your session

- Your task is to facilitate the 10-minute session using this facilitator guide. As you prepare, feel free to adjust your approach based on your participants and your personal style, as well as incorporating core principles you will learn in the session. Consider adding a personal story or anecdote to the content.
- The DFX Model is the core of the program. You will learn more about this in the program prior to facilitating your session. You will be reinforcing what the group has learned by focusing on the difference between presenters and facilitators, with facilitation being the goal.

Session Preparation

- Prepare the following flip charts:
 - Session Objectives and Agenda (see below)
 - Print and cut up presenter and facilitator characteristics for activity (see Appendix)

Topic	Timing	Instructions and talking points
Welcome and introduction	30 seconds	• Welcome the participants to this session on “Facilitation vs. Presentation”. • Briefly introduce yourself.
DFX facilitation model	30 seconds	Refer to the DFX Model (You will learn more about this in class, but the components relevant to this topic are described below). SAY: Effective facilitators need to deliver with impact by conveying key information in an engaging and motivating way. This ties back to the Lead portion of the DFX Model outer ring, as well as the Center ring: Engagement and Motivation.

Topic	Timing	Instructions and talking points
Objectives and agenda	30 seconds	- Review the session objectives on the flip chart. - Explain the distinction between facilitating and presenting and have a clear understanding of your role as a facilitator for Deloitte. - Build your understanding of the role of the facilitator and the skills that are required to work effectively as a facilitator - Review the session agenda on the flip chart: - Welcome and overview - Discussion - Presenters vs. facilitators - Activity – Knowing the difference - Debrief & Wrap-Up
Discussion – Facilitation vs. Presentation	2 minutes	ASK: What do you think the difference is between a presenter/presentation vs a facilitator/facilitation? SAY: Remember our discussion in the main classroom – “Sage on Stage” vs. “Guide on the side”. Cover any other points below not shared in response to the question: Presentation is giving information to a group in a way that does not necessarily include interaction between group members. Facilitation is helping or guiding a group so that the group achieves its goals. Presenters focus on giving information. Giving one-way information to participants does not lead to a sustained behavior change. Sustained behavior change is more complex and is encouraged by active learning and engaging participants. This is what facilitators seek to do.
Activity	5 minutes	SAY: We are going to do an activity (or game) to determine if the characteristics we cover are those a presenter or facilitator would demonstrate. Provide clear and concise activity instructions.

Topic	Timing	Instructions and talking points
		- Place all pre-cut phrases in the middle of the table. - Split the participants into two teams and have them sit together. - Inform participants each team will take turns selecting and reading a short phrase – each is associated with either a “facilitator” or a “presenter”. - As they read each phrase, the teams may quickly confer with each other (quietly) and then share if it is best associated with a “facilitator” or a “presenter” and why. - You can set a quick time limit (e.g., 5 seconds) and track correct points to gamify on a whiteboard or flipchart. - If the correct answer is not provided, you can use effective questioning to help them accurately provide the correct response. - Do as many as you can in the allotted time before giving a proper closing but make the amount provided to each team even.
Debrief & Wrap Up	1 minute 30 seconds	DO: Debrief by asking the participants to reflect and share their most important takeaway from this session and how they will apply this moving forward. Revisit the COMB. Thank everyone for their attention and participation.

APPENDIX – to be used for participant activity

Print out the phrases below and cut them into strips. Each of them is a “presenter” or “facilitator” quality. Have participant teams take turns drawing from the pile of characteristics and have them guess which they think it represents. Use effective questioning to flush out the correct answers. A key is also provided below with the correct answers.

Focus on communicating content
Listen, probe, and manage group dynamics
Ask at the end, “What have you learned?”
Promote interactive learning
Talk more than ask questions
Focus on helping learners apply the content
Use questions to generate discussion
Promote passive learning
Differentiate learners and respond to their different needs
Use PowerPoint to deliver key messages
Ask at the end, “How was my performance?”
Seek to build trust with audience
Seek to impress the audience
